The Bartletts maintained their point lead in the Placer-Nevada League Sunday, despite wins by Folsom, Auburn and Colfax, by virtue of a forfeited victory over Wheatland.

Wheatland's games will be forfeited as the schedule runs along and there will be no substitute club.

The general effect of Sunday's battles was to put the first four clubs higher in the standings and drive the last four clubs further into the cellar.

The Bartletts, it will be noted in the club standings, will need to keep going to stay ahead of Folsom, with three more weeks left in the league schedule.

After next week at Auburn, the Barts have the Folsom outfit here for July 4 in what, by all appearances at this time, will be the "crosshair" battle of the closing weeks in the league this season.

SOVIET TRANS-POLAR AIRMEN PLAN TOUR OF U. S.

Plane Used On 5500-Mile Non-Stop Hop Across Arctic Wastes To Be Shipped To Russia; New Exploits Planned

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UP)—Three Russian fliers who conquered the Polar flight from Moscow to the United States will tour the United States for about a month before returning to Moscow, Russian Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky revealed today.

The tour will start from Swan Island airport in Portland, Oregon, at 3 p. m. today when the party will embark by a chartered plane for San Francisco, the ambassador said.

COLFAX WINS IN SWAT-FEST AT LOOMIS

COLFAX—The Colfax Lions kept themselves in the Placer-Nevada League pennant race yesterday as a result of their victory over the Loomis Reds by the score of 9 to 5. The game was a hard hitting affair with the Lions having the edge 15 to 11, in safe hits. Glenn Smith, Sacramento youth, playing for Colfax, hit a home run while Ray Brock, the locals pitcher, hit a triple and two singles for the best batting average of the game. Brock pitched the entire game for Colfax, while the Reds used three twirlers. The score:

Loomis 5 14 3

Colfax 9 15 3

Bishop Porter In Tahoe Parish

He plans a series of special addresses for services in July and August.

Camp Sacramento Is Open For Season

Camp Sacramento, the Capital city's playground in the high Sierra was opened for the vacation season Sunday. It will remain open until August 29.

Prices remained unchanged from last year, J. B. Maloney recreation superintendent, said. Among improvements at the camp this year are a new foot bridge across the American river and a decorative arch for the entrance.

Mrs. Alma Dellis has returned to duties at the title company office following a ten-day absence occasioned by illness.

The plane which made the 5500-mile non-stop flight which ended here at 8:22 a. m. (PST) Sunday when a dense fog prevented the fliers from reaching San Francisco, 592 miles farther south, will serve as a "technological guinea pig" in the interests of Soviet aviation. It will be carefully dismantled here and crated for shipment to Russia, where each part will be scientifically inspected and studied by Soviet technicians. In this way, Troyanovsky said, the effects of the epochal flight on the ship, will determine future development of Russian aviation.

Ambassador Troyanovsky revealed that the Soviet Union plans many more such flights but he does not know what those plans are at present.

"This flight demonstrated," he said, "the feasibility of long distant flying by Soviet planes."

The technical possibilities in aviation are so great and the study of this flight may be so important to the development of aviation that the Russian government did not want to run the risk of flying the huge monoplane beyond where it ended its long flight, Troyanovsky said.

He praised the fliers warmly and said that a great celebration will be held in Moscow when the triumphant trio returns from the tour of the United States.

The three flying heroes—Valeria Chkalov, chief pilot, G. P. Baidukov and A. V. Beliakov—arose this morning fully recovered physically from the hardships of their 63 hour, 17 minute flight.

Arthur Mart, general chairman, on Monday morning expressed the thanks of the committee to all groups and individuals for the assistance given the committee in their work. It was especially asked that any firms having claims against the picnic committee file them promptly to the end that the affairs of the committee may be closed promptly.

BRADDOCK TO BEAT LOUIS

"Prof." McLeMore Makes Prophecy By Phrenology

NEW YORK (UP)—A ringside description of the Braddock-Louis fight in Chicago tomorrow night will be broadcast over the Red and Blue Networks of the NBC beginning at 7 p. m. PST. NBC announced today that 125 stations will participate in the broadcast, which is to be under sponsorship of the Buick Motor Car Company.

By HENRY McLEMORE
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO (UP)—James J. Braddock will retain his world's heavyweight championship tomorrow night by outpointing Joe Louis over the full derby distance of 15 rounds.

This isn't guess work. It's phrenology, one of the few absolute sciences.

Two months ago when this fight was definitely sealed, and I knew I would have to pick the winner, I threw out feelers for a new method of selection. Tea leaves failed me sadly, even the usually reliable Orange Pekoe. So had gypsies, ouija boards, spirit messages, dreams, numerology, crystal-gazing and other occult angles.

So I turned to phrenology, that system of skull interpretation which makes the human noggin as easy to read as a McGuffey primer. For $10 I enrolled in a correspondence school which teaches the science.

It took me seven weeks to graduate, which means that it was only yesterday that I received my mortar board.

I passed up the commencement exercises to stay here and read my own head for the name of the winner between Braddock and Louis. Today in my study, whose deep quiet is broken only by a shimmy in the transmission of my Morris chair, I took my head in my hands and read every line of it. The first bump I investigated was an (Turn to Page 3)

STUDY COURSE IN COUNTY CONSIDERED

Members of the county school board were in session Monday morning considering a new course of study which is being developed for the county schools. The course will be based upon a three-year period and, when completed, will be transcribed into a loose-leaf system which may be changed from time to time.

The school board has for consideration in development of the new study course, the conclusions reached by various section meetings of the county teachers' association held during the past year. These are based upon the classroom experience of the teachers in the handling of the various subjects.

Reckless Driver Fined $25

Incest Charged To Trinidad Rizo

Trinidad Rizo, 32, was taken into custody Sunday by county authorities and is held at the county jail for trial on a charge of incest. Officials report that they have evidence to support the charges which will be presented at the proper time.

Mrs. Ruth Willis has returned to duties in the district attorney's office following a brief vacation.

115 Enrolled For Camp

4-H Clubs And Farm Centers In Weekend Outing At Tahoe

An attendance of 115 and a general good time for everyone was the report Monday morning on the second annual over-night camp of El Dorado County 4-H Clubs and Farm Centers, held Saturday and Sunday at the county campground at Lake Tahoe.

By arrangement with the Forest Service, which conducts the camp, a section of the campground was reserved for the exclusive use of the two groups and their guests and the outing was concluded with an absence of any mishaps or other untoward incidents.

The various 4-H Clubs and Farm Centers had met before the camp on group plans for the outing and those attending arrived at the campground under their own transportation arrangements during mid-afternoon, Saturday.

Luggage was hauled to the camp site by Everett Haslam, driving George Volz' truck, and by H. B. Tatum, while Max Bollman provided and drove the truck which carried the commissary supplies for the Saturday evening meal.

Probably the high-light of the camp was the Saturday evening campfire, although much interest was shown in the Sunday morning tour to Angora Lakes lookout of the forest service, where Clay Hansen explained his duties and "what happens when we discover a fire."

The camp broke up following the noon meal, Sunday.

The Saturday evening program was opened by S. A. Bivans, camp director, who introduced Mrs. Will Miller, the program chairman.

Following recital of the 4-H Club pledge by all present, Mrs. Miller in-

Councilmen ruled additionally that any carnivals granted operating permits in the future must provide satisfactory evidence of adequate insurance coverage. Miss Hill was killed Saturday night.

General Beaumont Get New Post

We once heard a woman say that her one regret in life was that she had not been alive in Goya's time to have her portrait painted by him. After seeing the Goya Exhibit at the Palace of the Legion of Honor, we wonder at her courage for Goya, a realist. Although he was court painter, he never flattered his patrons. Beneath the Spanish hauteur and the courtly grace, if there were meanness or weaknesses in the sitter's character, they were mercilessly revealed.

Francisco Goya was born in a village in Aragon in 1746. His life was long and more or less tempestuous from the accounts we have of it. He was father of twenty children (by one wife, we are told) but only one child grew to maturity. A colorful incident in Goya's life was his friendship with the Duchess of Alba whose portrait he painted many times. It is said that Goya called at her apartment every morning to make up her face. Like the Italian artists Titian and the Japanese Hokusai, Goya reached greatness late in life. At 79 he was experimenting in the new medium of lithography with success. He died at the age of 82.

Among the most arresting of the Goya canvases at the Exhibit, are the three of children. Goya's children are not merry, carefree youngsters like those of the English painter Reynolds. Somehow the inevitable doom of age and death seems written on these small faces, yet they endear themselves to us at once and we find ourselves coming back to them again and again. The canvas of the "Little Girl With A Dog," from the Hearst collection at San Simeon, has a very special appeal. Her elaborate period dress and funny little hat weighted with flowers and feathers simply that she was one of the aristocracy. It is a loveable little face but scarcely a happy one. The tiny "Don Emanuel" who wears the red suit that all mothers must long to copy for their small son looks at the world with more fear and apprehension than innocent candor. Victor Guey's elfin face has a haunting quality that we cannot forget.

But not all the faces of the Spanish grandees reveal cruelty, many bear the signature of pain. Goya seems to have been preoccupied with the tragic misery of life for which he felt a profound sympathy. The etchings and drawings, not easy to look at with their grim, sardonic humor and, in some instances, Medusan horror, awaken human pity once the feeling of revulsion is overcome.

But after all, we did not go to the Exhibit just to have our emotions perturbed. A great artist gives beholders new eyes. Seeing the Goyas is an experience that will give you in full measure as much as you bring to it. The portraits have a depth and a sharpness that etches them into the memory. The bright colors of his earlier pictures quicken you with their vibrant quality while the later ones in exquisite and shadowy silvers are no less beautiful though more subdued. Goya gives a new delight in form and color as well as a new understanding of Spain and its people. Today we read in the papers about the deeds of bravery on the battlefields of Spain and about deeds of savage cruelty. The Goya pictures give an insight into the character of the Spanish people so that one understands a little better what is fine and what is base in this character. And isn't it understanding that heightens life and "lends a glory to our dust?"

Books like Millen Brand's "The Outward Room," Jim Curran's "A Mind Restored," Henry Brown's "A Mind Misled" and Phyllis Bottome's "Private Worlds" of a few seasons ago, awaken an interest in psychiatry. We heard Mr. E. W. Nilsson, a Freudian psychiatrist, clarify some things for us last week.

"There are two kinds of thinking," Mr. Nilsson declared, "systematic thinking with which we carry on the activities of daily life and which constitutes a very thin layer of the thought apparatus of man and unsystematic thinking which is the great reservoir that does not come to the surface. Between these two kinds of thought is consciousness. When certain thoughts in the subconsciousness cannot find an outlet through consciousness to the surface, a neurotic personality results.

A psychoanalyst's job is to find the outlet for the neurosis or thought that is acting up in the subconsciousness. Mr. Nilsson suggests the following new books for those who are interested in psychoanalysis. A very new book is "The Mind of Man," by Dr. Walter Bromberg of Bellevue hospital, which gives a history of the treatment of the sick mind from ancient times to the present. Elizabeth Adamson's "So You're Going To A Psychiatrist," is written in a popular style and easy to understand. There is a new translation of Freud's "A General Introduction to Psychoanalysis," which Mr. Nilsson especially recommends. And "Twentieth Century Psychiatry," by William A. White, reviews our age in the light of the emotional adjustments that men and women must make in this world of changing conditions.

"Action at Aquila," Hervey Allen's new book will be published in the season of 1937-38. We have not heard whether or not it will equal its predecessor, "Anthony Adverse," in size.

Braddock To Beat Louis

old one that I got from falling out of a peach tree in Georgia. It yielded the crop statistics in Rhode Island, the longitude and latitude of Madagascar, and the original manuscript of the Gettysburg address, written on the back of an envelope by the Great Emancipator himself.

The gradual rise back of my right ear was very productive. There, in bold italics, were the first three chapters of Elinor Glyn's "The Shiek," the heights of a stoop-shouldered singer midget standing in a ditch, and the exact location of the lost chord.

I sent a Saint Bernard out for the "lost chord," and went on with my reading. Finally, snuggled deep in a recess of my cranium, I found a plateau that told me about the fight. As I rubbed it, there came a great ringing of gongs in my ears. Resin dust filtered before my eyes, and a rabbit brought me in a drink of punch.

Braddock, the plateau revealed, will be knocked down twice before the fourth round is completed. But he will get up and Louis, discouraged and tired, will fade. For ten rounds Braddock will jab Joe—jab him—with a left. In the twelfth round Louis will be very close to losing by a knockout, but will manage to get up and hang on until the finish.

That's all I know. It should be enough to make you much money.

BERRY NAMED AS VICE-PRES. OF LOAN BANK

Election of Charles E. Berry as vice-president of the Twelfth District Federal Home Loan Bank by the bank's board of directors, was approved on June 18 by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Berry has been the field representative of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in the twelfth district since January, 1934, and in that capacity has had charge of organization of new federal savings and loan associations in Arizona, California, Nevada and the Territory of Hawaii. He was at one time affiliated with the Los Angeles Mutual Building and Loan Association, now the Los Angeles Federal Savings and Loan Association. He was in charge of the reorganization of the Railway Mutual Building and Loan Association (now the Railway Federal Savings and Loan Association) and for several years handled organization work for other California building and loan associations.

QUALITY PLUMS BRING BETTER RETURNS

Returns to California growers for fresh plums now being shipped to out-of-state markets are nearly 50 per cent greater than last year, largely as a result of stronger consumer demand. L. P. Singer of Lincoln stated today. Mr. Singer is chairman of the Plum Commodity Committee of the California Tree Fruit Agreement.

High standards of quality for California fresh plums established at the opening of the 1937 season early this month in the regulations issued by the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture under the California Tree Fruit Agreement are largely responsible for the increase in consumer demand, Singer pointed out.

The regulations issued by the Secretary of Agriculture provide for the elimination of green fruit, undesirable grades and small sizes on interstate shipments of plums from California.

During the first 17 days of the current marketing season, Singer said, 386 cars of fresh California plums have been shipped interstate as compared with 441 cars during the first 17 days of last year's shipping season.

The 72,538 crates sold on Eastern auction markets during the 17 days of the present season, have brought a weighted average price of $2.29 per crate as compared with a weighted average price of $1.41 per crate received for 80,000 crates shipped during the same period last year.

While it is expected the present price level may not continue, Singer stated, indications are that the price level for the entire 1937 plum shipping season will probably be considerably higher than last year.
